

Letter to guardians about the 9th grade joint application system 2024

Dear guardian of a 9th grade student,

Your child is facing an important choice as it is time to apply for further education in the joint application system. Choosing a new educational institution can be a difficult and demanding process. At the same time, it is an interesting and exciting opportunity. The Finnish school system is flexible, and regardless of a student's primary choice it offers the possibility to re-choose or study further. No option is worse than another. It is essential, however, that everyone has a chance to apply for the most appropriate educational option. Everyone has their own wishes, interests, individual characteristics, strengths and talents. It is vital that we plan and reflect upon the future in a constructive manner, taking our time, both at school and at home. When choosing a career, the most important element is knowing oneself.

We cover the basic facts about educational options and the application process during student counselling lessons. You can find additional information about the joint application system at www.opintopolku.fi. The same site is also available in English at www.studyinfo.fi. We also have counselling through Google Classrooms, which we use for sharing important information with students.

We encourage students to visit different educational institutions (up to a maximum of three during school time but students may visit as many as they like outside school time). Guardians may visit the institutions with their children when schools organise open doors days.

We also provide individual counselling. Guardians may contact the student counsellor via Wilma or email or by phone. Guardians are involved as we ask you to fill out a planning form (in Finnish) and return it just after the winter holiday.

Criteria for student acceptance

Students are required to have a middle school final assessment to be accepted into an educational programme included in the joint application system. The minimum grade point average and points gained in entrance tests varies from year to year in general upper secondary schools and vocational schools.

Students can practise completing the form prior to the actual application time through a demo version. The demo version will close about a week before the beginning of the joint application.

Vocational upper secondary qualification programmes

Points are given to applicants in the following manner:

- A. Completing basic education or voluntary additional basic education in the year of submitting the application: 6p
- B. General success in studies (GPA): max. 16p
- C. Emphasised subjects (arts and skills subjects): max. 8p
- D. The first school on the applicant's list: 2p
- E. Possible entrance or aptitude test: 1–10p

More information about the points can be found on school websites and at www.opintopolku.fi.

In the case that a student has a special reason such as a learning disability, a social reason that has affected their achievement at school, or a certificate completed abroad, they do an application in exceptional educational circumstances. An official document is required and it is to be delivered according to the instructions given at www.opintopolku.fi.

Vocational programmes cannot accept applicants whose illness or handicap clearly prevents them from participating. Student guidance counsellors and the school nurse can help to clarify aspects linked to health in career planning.

General upper secondary education

Students are selected according to their theoretical subjects' grade point average. Some upper secondary schools organise an entrance exam or an interview or require a personal application in addition to considering the grade point average.

Some upper secondary schools ask students to fill out a separate subject selection card that is returned according to the school's instructions. This card is used to indicate what subjects the student is planning to study during the first year. If a school uses a subject selection card, it can be found on the school's website.

Alternative educational paths

- Preparatory education (TUVA)
- Certain study programmes in folk high schools
- International schools not participating in joint application system

For more information, ask the student guidance counsellors or see www.opintopolku.fi or the institutions' websites.

When applying for programmes that are not part of the joint application system, students must make sure by themselves that they fill out a form and deliver it in due time. Student guidance counsellors can help when needed.
